ABSTRACT

The Reading is FUNdamental program is funded by the Ford Foundation and sponsored by the Smithsonian Institution. It is designed to motivate children to read through experiencing the joy and pride of owning books of their own choice. Its purpose is to help develop and give technical assistance to a variety of model projects throughout the country. This supplement to the RIF Guide to Book Selection is prepared to assist RIF projects and other similar programs to select and purchase inexpensive books, mainly paper backs, at the elementary level. Approximately 1,350 titles are included in this listing under a general list and sections for black, Indian, and Spanish-speaking elementary students. Supplement 2, Fall 1971

The National Reading Is Fun-damental Program (RIF) is funded by the Ford Foundation and is sponsored by The Smithsonian Institution. RIF's National Advisory Board is composed of distinguished men and women from such diverse fields as publishing, education, libraries, government, civil rights, industry, labor, and the arts. The RIF Program is designed to motivate children to read through experiencing the joy and pride of owning books of their own choice.

The pilot project for RIF was begun in Washington, D. C. in 1966. A number of additional projects are now in operation throughout the country not only in urban centers but also in rural areas and on Indian reservations. RIF is an action program to make books a way of life for all of America's children.

Introduction

Reading Is Fundamental has grown since the first Book Guide was published early in 1970 from eight projects to thirty projects located in urban and rural areas throughout the country. A public-service advertising campaign for RIF was launched in September and October, 1971. Its theme is "If America is to grow up thinking, Reading Is Fundamental".

RIF's goal in this campaign is to move individuals and organizations to establish RIF projects in their own communities and to win business support. Within the coming months we anticipate a large increase in the number of RIF projects.

Supplement No. 2 to the RIF GUIDE TO BOOK SELECTION has been prepared primarily to assist not only RIF projects but also other similar programs throughout the country in the purchase of inexpensive books, mainly paperbacks, at the elementary level. This is the age group RIF is primarily interested in reaching. If children have not learned to enjoy books at the elementary age level it is highly probable they may never find joy in reading.

Approximately 1350 titles are included in this supplement. The graded ranges for reading and interest have been provided only as guides. Very often a book will be interesting and enjoyable for readers of other grades as well. In the final analysis, the judgment will depend on the booklist user and his familiarity with the children his program is serving.

RIF has already received several thousand requests for the Book Guide. These have come from every state and from several foreign countries. Orders for the Guide have come from: public and private schools, public libraries, libraries of colleges and universities, corporations, business and civic associations, churches, publishers, government agencies, foundations, individuals and miscellaneous organizations and groups.

In order to encourage the publication of many more elementary level titles in paperback, RIF met with officers of the Association of American Publishers, Inc., and with representatives of several publishing companies. A special plea was made for more paperbacks for minority group children.

Last spring three publishing houses launched their first juvenile paperback book lines. Since then several more companies have moved into the juvenile field. Although the prices are higher than we would like, we are cheered by this trend.

RIF has also met with officers of BIPAD, a national book distributing organization. At RIF's request, they prepared a RIF manual of operations for the wholesalers. This, along with a number of RIF materials, is being mailed to their membership of book distributors. We feel confident this action will contribute toward facilitating the purchase of books by local RIF projects and other similar programs.

In addition to distributing and lending books, several RIF projects have experimented with the sale of books. One project, from April 1 to June 24 of this year, sold over 20,000 paperback books.

RIF is cooperating with the U.S. Office of Education's Right to Read Program and the National Reading Center, in an attempt to stimulate a national interest in reading and books.

From the beginning of the Pilot Project in Washington, D.C., in 1966, to date RIF has collected a vast amount of evidence that leads to an important conclusion: To stimulate the habit of reading spontaneously for fun, books must be made readily available at all times—in the classroom and in the home. It is our hope that schools and libraries will face up to this responsibility by making paperback books increasingly available in both the classroom and the community.

It is also our hope that publishers will do their part by adding a great many new titles to the number of children's paperbacks now in circulation, with special emphasis on books for minority group children.

Introduction to Special Booklist for Ethnic Groups

Of the approximately 1350 titles included in Supplement No. 2, nearly 800 appear in the Special Booklist for Ethnic Groups. Because there are still relatively few paperbacks for black, Spanish-speaking or American Indian children, we have also listed hardbound books. We are hopeful that the modest increase in paperbacks for minority group children indicates a trend in the publishing industry.

Supplement 2 has 108 paperbacks for black children; the first Book Guide had 80. Forty of these titles were listed as hardbound books in the original Book Guide. For Spanish-speaking children, Supplement 2 has 78 paperbacks; the first Book Guide had 22. Fifty paperbacks are listed in Supplement 2 for Indian children; the first Book Guide had 22. The total number of paperbacks for minority group children in all three Book Guides is 401.

We hope there will be a substantial increase in the number of paperback books that relate to the lives and experiences of many of the children the RIF program aims to serve. Literature plays an important role in contributing to a child's self-image. For Mexican-American, Puerto Rican, American Indian, Appalachian, and Black urban and rural children there are still far too few inexpensive books published to serve this vitally important role.

Although a number of Spanish-language books are listed in the Guide, they are limited mainly to books published in this country. A few Spanish-language bibliographies that contain titles published by both U.S. and foreign publishers are included under our List of Sources Used.

For those persons interested in the purchase of Spanish-language books for children, many of which are published in other countries, write:

Martha V. Tomé, Director
Proyecto Leer
Organization of American States
Washington, D.C. 20006

Two objectives of the above organization are: one, to evaluate and list material in Spanish for K to 12th Grade reading levels; two, to help make those books available through distributors in this country.

A few distributors have been recommended to us by Spanish-language programs, including the RIF project being conducted with the Los Angeles public schools. Catalogues are available from the following:

Heffernan Supply Co., Inc.
P. O. Box 5309
San Antonio, Texas 78201

Latin American Productions
P. O. Box 41017
Los Angeles, California 90041

Hispanic American Publications, Inc.
252 East 51st Street
New York, N.Y. 10022

A RIF study is being made of the availability of relevant materials for the Spanish-speaking population. The study is also seeking to determine the accessibility and the extent of use of available materials. It is being conducted for RIF by Leveo Sanchez of Development Associates, Inc., Washington, D.C., through a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities. This study is scheduled to be completed in November and the copies of the findings will be available from the National RIF office.
